which you can see here: <https://www.stirnz.org/tetiritibasedfutures>. There is so much that has been happening - with this; Ihumatao; Tuia 250; etc..... and the March timing of the Auckland initiative does not fit well with what will be happening in Christchurch in March in relation to the anniversary of the mosque shootings.

So NWO is hosting a gathering at 7.30pm January 27th at the CWEA (59 Gloucester St) to talk about anything which we may like to contribute from Christchurch or how we could add to this collective work.

We would be delighted if you could come. As facilitators of this event, it would be good to know numbers coming so do let us know by 23 January whether you can make it.

Mangling Māori names is no longer 'the way it is'

Calls to Marcus Lush's Newstalk ZB show defending the incorrect pronunciation of Māori place names in Otago have been captured and shared by angry listeners.

Should we despair at the callers' attitudes, or celebrate the popular response, asks Māori Language Commissioner Rawinia Higgins. READ MORE

Te reo Māori on a 'pathway towards extinction'

"In Aotearoa New Zealand, we show that if resources such as teachers are scarce, it is best to focus these on the indigenous population initially and only roll these out to the broader population once the language has reached critical mass." READ MORE

'It's miraculous': Owners say cultural burning saved their property

... Three weeks ago, he and other owners were forced to evacuate, helplessly watching online as the Gospers Mountain fire converged with the Little L Complex fire and appeared to engulf the property. To his amazement, when he returned two days later, traversing the long gravel driveway on foot after fallen trees blocked vehicle access, most structures remained perfectly intact. "I came around the bend and could see my hut still standing, I just couldn't believe it," he said. "It burnt right around the house ... it was as if somebody had been here watching it and putting it out, but there wasn't, there was nobody here at all." READ MORE

A life together: The rise of cohousing, papakāinga and the ‘social mortgage’

Quoted from article: "I was privileged in 2018 to live with whanuanga at Ngāti Whātua's papakāinga development, Kainga Tuatahi in Ōrākei. The 30-unit residential development is within metres of Takaparawhā (Bastion Point) and Ōrākei marae. Down the hill on Paritai Drive, multi-million dollar mansions enjoy the same stunning views of Rangitoto, Waitematā Harbour and Hauraki Gulf. Celebrated in architectural design circles, the two clusters of houses sit on either side of Kupe Street. Terraced town houses border a driveway and garden with māra kai beds, providing children with a central yard to play in where an eye can be kept on their activities from most kitchens (what child doesn't want to play with their friends and cousins in the backyard every day?)."
